Across the Aviation Industry, Unisys is a Consistent Service Provider with Powerful Credentials.

Transportation players – airlines, airports and air cargo players – are constantly poised to take off. They are also constantly facing turbulence. These industries are flying into the headwinds of the most complex mix of challenges since the first commercial airlines ran 100 years ago. Customer demand is in constant flux, fuel costs pose a persistent threat to the business and technology innovation is forcing business leaders to regularly rethink their entire business models.

There may have been a day when slow and steady won the race in the Transportation industry, but those days are long gone. From forecasting to 'now-casting', long-term planning has been replaced by real-time visibility, big data and predictive analytics. Hardware upgrades and depreciated IT assets have been supplanted by SaaS solutions, virtualization and cloud computing. Ticket counters, call centers, and websites are giving way to mobile, social and agile computing.

The good news is that these complex mixes of challenges are being met by an ever-expanding array of technology solutions. Transportation executives are now called to lead the company through this IT-led innovation while maintaining on-ground efficiency, business stability and marketplace competitiveness.

Unisys works with executives—on the tarmac and in the boardroom—to not only ensure that their technology and operations meet the grueling demands of today's business climate, but also transform the journey and deliver the transportation experience of tomorrow to their customers today.

Cross-industry Challenges Require Depth of Vertical with Breadth of Horizontal Solutions

Airlines operate in an environment with many moving parts. To navigate this complexity, airlines must establish highly reliable and intelligent airline systems. We should know - Unisys has engineered the worldwide passenger service systems including Unisys AirCore® for top global airlines and supports them with modern, business solutions.

Airports today are so much more than an arrival and departure location for planes. They are mini-cities, and home to massive retail attractions, large parking operations and big business. Airports worldwide depend on Unisys to help them boost revenue, reduce cost of operations and improve the passenger experience through our suite of transformative Airport Passenger Facilitation Solutions and our Airport Operations Management Solutions.

Cargo carriers are looking to tech-driven efficiencies to solidify their stability and growth, and the challenges can be daunting. From booking to handling, from warehouse management to tracking and tracing, and from revenue management to revenue accounting, Unisys Logistics Management Solutions Suite helps air cargo carriers, ground handlers and freight forwarders achieve high performance and manage their operations in a profitable, secure and flexible manner.
